Queens Botanical Gardens and the annual Dragon Boat Festival on Meadow Lake each August. Presenting the award to HSBC was Assemblymember Catherine Nolan and accepting it was HSBC's John Kourkoutis, who called himself a Brooklynite with eight years' experience in Queens at HSBC.

The third recipient, Plaxall Inc., came to Long Island City after being uprooted from Flushing. The company was founded by the remarkable Louis H. Pfohl, an engineer, lawyer, architect, designer—and inventor. His invention was a method of plastics manufacturing called thermoforming, and from it he founded Plaxall. He set up operations in Flushing in the late 1940s, in a plant largely of his own design. He was no sooner started than he was stunned to find himself in the path of Robert Moses and eminent domain, two irresistible forces. Because an apartment project was to be built where his Flushing plant stood, he had to abandon it and search until he found a new site, in Long Island City on 46th Avenue. Plaxall has remained there since, and is now in its third generation as a family business. His son, James Pfohl, bought local properties. One result of this has been enhancement of the arts in Long Island City, where artists such as Tadashi Murakami and Matthew Barney have taken space, architect Richard Meier has set up a model museum and art dealer Jeffrey Deitch has established a studio. Accepting the award for Plaxall was Louis H. Pfohl's grandson and current company president, Matthew Quigley. He remarked that despite the changes coming over Long Island City, there are still several family businesses in operation there.

Speaking briefly at the luncheon, Queens Borough President Helen Marshall praised the "gold standard" rating awarded to the new Citibank building that stands beside the one built earlier in Long Island City and told an anecdote indicating that even traditional business ceremonies are changing there. When the building was opened last month, she said, instead of cutting a ribbon, the celebrants watered the plants on the ground floor.■

Even after sharing the bird with the dog, the cat and the neighbors, that leaves a lot of turkey to be turned into leftovers. Did you know that the typical Thanksgiving meal gob-

While this list does not include hors d'oeuvres, cheese and crackers, cheese platters or other goodies, DOH officials said, "Let's face it. Thanksgiving is a food holiday. It's the one day each year when we can overeat without feeling guilty. Hopefully, this list will help people choose foods that will fill them up without weighing them down."
